The ClimateMusic Project

is a nonprofit collaborative bringing together renowned scientists and world-class musicians to create music and visual experiences guided by climate science.

Mission

We connect people to climate science and action through the emotional power of music.

Why?

The urgency of the climate crisis requires immediate collective action, yet the climate crisis can feel overwhelming for many. The evocative power of music has the ability to reach and inspire people of all ages, cultures, and income levels.

We compose music in a variety of genres to build understanding and to facilitate action across diverse communities.

Programs and Resources

Performances

Our primary offerings are our music and visual performances with post-concert audience engagement, presented as live or streamed experiences. ClimateMusic's portfolio includes six compositions—with a seventh now in development—that address topics like rising sea levels, the effects of global warming on nature and biodiversity, and the meaningful actions we can take today. With performance times ranging from 10 to 30 minutes and supplemental educational materials included, these experiences facilitate individual and collective action.

Action Kits

ClimateMusic offers four Action Kits, short shareable guides that outline individual and collective actions that anyone can take to address climate change and be part of the solution.

Collaborations

Through collaborations with other organizations that share our mission, we are able to multiply our reach and impact.

- Engaging with grassroots organizations provides our audiences with additional insights on the climate crisis, and accessible pathways for action.
- Partnering with conveners of events including, for example, the National Academy of Sciences, the World Bank, and the World Economic Forum, showcases our work to new audiences around the globe.
- Joining forces with music-focused activist groups, such as Music Declares Emergency, allows us to create new programs and campaigns such as our global Be Cool! Campaign inspiring youth activism which has engaged thousands of young people from four continents.

What's Next?

- Book ClimateMusic for your conference, school, or community event.
- Donate to ClimateMusic to accelerate our work so that we can reach and activate millions around the world.
- Download an Action Kit to jumpstart your personal climate action journey.
- Volunteer with ClimateMusic - use your talents to help us spread the word about climate action!
